Clinton County Continues to Monitor Coronavirus

CLINTON – Clinton County officials are reminding the community to continue to follow CDC recommendations to protect those who may be more vulnerable to the coronavirus (COVID-19) and to reduce strain on local medical facilities.

Those recommendations include washing your hands, covering your cough, not touching your face and stay at home when sick.

Along with following those recommendations, officials are encouraging residents to conduct any business they may have remotely. Residents should do as much business as they can using their phones, computers, text messages, other messaging apps they have and the US Postal Service.

Clinton County residents are also cautioned to be skeptical of rumors. Residents should confirm facts with trusted resources such as the Iowa Department of Public Health website at <https://idph.iowa.gov/Emerging-Health-Issues/Novel-Coronavirus>.

Officials encourage residents to continue to monitor the Clinton County Emergency Management Facebook page and the Clinton County website, www.clintoncounty-ia.gov, for any updates.

Clinton County officials will provide updates as dictated by a change in the current situation.
